¶ THE INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF ETHICS deals with the fundamental principles of ethics and with the various phases of individual conduct and social morality. It will give especial prominence to the principles of justice and of law as the agency of justice. It affords a common ground for interchange of views between students of law and students of ethics and the social sciences. It aims at constructive thinking and appeals to all, whether lawyers or laymen, who desire to keep abreast of the great movement in legal thought, as well as of other pressing moral and social problems of the time.
